Easily and elegantly install sliding doors: GEZE Levolan 120

Sliding doors are the perfect choice for dividing large spaces in office or residential buildings in an aesthetic, space-saving and functional manner. GEZE, the specialist for innovative door, window and safety technology, offers the compact Levolan 120 sliding door system as a sophisticated, design-oriented fitting solution for heavy manual sliding doors made of wood or glass in internal applications.

With its discreet appearance and compact dimensions, the sliding door system can be integrated into any architecture and installation situation. Thanks to the compact, modular design, the Levolan 120 is not larger, yet carries twice the load of its "little brother" Levolan 60, making it the optimal solution for heavy door leaves. All-glass or wood sliding doors with door leaf weights of up to 120 kilograms can be designed easily and elegantly, and moved effortlessly. The Levolan Smart fix installation system ensures quick and simple installation, requiring just an Allen key and open-ended spanner to secure. It also offers system components that facilitate later integration of the draw-in damping (SoftStop) – without first disassembling the existing door fittings.

Easily install wooden leaf doors

The Levolan 120 for wooden leaves requires an aluminium profile, which is attached to the top front side of the door leaf. The roller carriage is mounted on the door leaf and suspended in the hardware system. Positioning the retaining tabs precisely down to the millimetre is unnecessary, since the end position is defined via the end stopper in the track system. This means that wooden leaves up to 42 mm thick can easily be used. Additional weight-dependent draw-in dampers (Softclose) can be used for even more operating comfort, and are mounted invisibly between the roller carriages.
